STRATEGIC COMPONENTS

STRATEGY #1 - CUSTOMER SERVICE:

The school practices ongoing customer service training which is provided to student services staff through the district's professional development program, Professional Development Management System (PDMS). Additionally, customer service strategies and practices are discussed at faculty and staff meetings, leadership meetings, and during informal huddles conducted weekly in the main office. The role of customer service in student retention is clear and strategies being consistently adjusted to reflect the needs of Baker Aviation students as they progress through the program. Student customer survey data is utilized to guide the development of these strategies. The evaluation of the data is conducted at leadership team meetings with the input of the school's administration, student services staff, and teachers. Strategies are discussed at length with students during Educational Excellence School Advisory Committee Meetings (EESAC) as evidenced by rosters and documented meeting minutes.

STRATEGY #2 - STUDENT WITHDRAWAL FOLLOW-UP:

Upon student withdrawal from the course of study, student services staff perform follow-up calls to determine the cause of the withdrawal from class. A report of students recently withdrawn from courses is generated by the school's registrar and disseminated to student services staff for follow-up. During follow-up calls, student services staff engage students to determine the cause for withdrawal. Causes for course withdrawal are then reported to the school's registrar. These results are discussed with administration and the school's leadership team when assessing the viability of strategies for reducing student attrition, moving forward. Student services staff routinely follow up with withdrawn students who reported external factors for their withdrawal from the course. Students who withdrew from courses for external personal reasons are referred to the school's counselor for counseling.

STRATEGY #3 - CASE MANAGEMENT/ COUNSELING:

Students are strongly encouraged to see a counselor prior to withdrawal from a course. During this session, the counselor will assess the student's reason for withdrawal from the course. The counselor will then present alternative means for scheduling and/or academic supplementation to support the student's learning goals. For academic related withdrawals, the counselor will provide the student with information on the school's review academies offered during the week and on weekends and refer the student to administration for enrollment in the academy. For student scheduling issues, the counselor will collaborate with the student and registrar to modify the student's schedule in a way that better fits their needs.

STRATEGY #4 - OCCUPATIONAL POINT PROGRESS MONITORING AND SCHEDULED SUBJECT SELECTION:

OCP Tracking:

Student services staff collaborate with testing personnel to monitor occupational point progress data. Occupational completion points are entered into two databases for tracking, the district's student data housing software, FOCUS, and the school's student grade monitoring system, DCAPIS. Utilizing reports from both systems, school administration guides the counseling office to conduct exit interviews and subject selection meetings with students to ensure continued course of study through the end of their respective programs.

Scheduled Subject Selection:

Scheduled subject selection occurs at the end of each trimester. During scheduled subject selection, student services staff collaborate with the counselor to engage all enrolled students individually to assess their current academic status and create a plan for program completion. During subject selection, enrolled students choose their upcoming coursework. Students who have recently completed an Occupational Completion Point are transitioned into the next course in order to continue the program in a timely fashion. During subject selection, local placement data is collected on every student as they select their coursework for the upcoming term.

EVALUATION PROCESS:

All strategic elements of the Student Retention Plan are reviewed with the school’s leadership team, which is comprised of members of the teaching faculty, student services, administrative team, and academic department heads. Additionally, results are discussed at school occupational advisory committee meetings for each program and the school’s educational excellence school advisory committee meetings. During these meetings, industry partners, students, and members of staff review the data for each strategic component of the plan to gauge its effectiveness and make recommendations for improvement as evidenced by committee meeting minutes and agendas. This is an ongoing process; continuous improvements and modifications are made to the plan and its strategic elements throughout the school year.

PUBLICATION AND DISSEMINATION OF PLAN TO STAKEHOLDERS:

All school plans and policies, including the Student Retention Plan are published and available to students, staff, and the general public online, at <https://www.bakeraviationtechcollege.com/> as well as to all Miami-Dade County Public Schools employees on the school’s collaboration SharePoint Website at <https://collaborationportal.dadeschools.net/sites/schools/7801/default.aspx>.
